To Dedicate Vepco Plant

Roanoke Rapids, N. C.- More than 3,000 persons are expected here on Wednesday, April 4, for the formal dedication of Virginia Electric and Power Company's $32,000,000 hydro-electric development on the Roanoke River. Governor Thomas B. Hodges will make the dedication address.

Details of the ceremonies, which will be attended by state officials of Virginia and North Carolina, were announced today by Ray H. Goodmon, vice-president of Vepco's Carolina Division, who will be the master of ceremonies.

The Roanoke Rapids High School band will begin playing patriotic music at 11 A. M., and will start the formal program at 11:30 A. M., with "The Star Spangled Banner."

After the ceremonies a barbecue luncheon will be served on the grounds and guests will be taken on a tour of inspection of the new hydro power station, the dam, and the company's new $300,000 service building headquarters, which is just being completed. The public is invited to attend.

The Roanoke Rapids hydro development is capable of generating 100,000 kilowats of electricity. Tied into Vepco's high voltage transmission system, the development is Vepco's first sizeable project using water power to produce electricity, its ninth major generating plant, and brings the kilowat capacity total to more than one and one quarter million. Vepco is currently serving more than 657,000 electric customers in North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia.

J. Lindsay Almond, Jr., Attorney General of Virginia, in a legal opinion this week, gave approval to a financial plan aimed at helping localities to forestall school integration. The opinion was given in response to a request from George Abbitt, Jr., Commonwealth's Attorney for Appomattox County. Mr. Abbitt requested the legal opinion on behalf of the Board of Supervisors of this county, now engaged in setting up the county budget and tax rate. No increase in the tax rate is contemplated.

Abbitt had reported the Appomattox board had before it a plan for its consideration whereby it would forego a tax levy for schools in the fiscal year beginning July 1 in preference for a general tax from which revenues for school purposes would be allocated on a monthly basis.

The Attorney General gave as his opinion that state law does not require a board of supervisors to make a special or separate school levy.

Next, he said, if the board refuses to appropriate enough money to operate the county schools for the entire school year, there is only one course of legal action that could be taken against it. Under state law, this course would require a petition signed by at least 20 per cent of the locality's qualified voters asking the local circuit court judge to call a referendum on whether a tax should be levied or a full year's appropriation made. But, Almond noted, the judge would have full discretion, even if such a petition were presented, to decide whether a referendum should be held. Almond said he could give no assurance that a board of supervisors wouldn't be brought into court if it refused to make the school appropriations. He pointed out that suits can be brought regardless of the legal grounds to support them.

Five counties in Virginia have adopted the month-to-month appropriation program and others are said to be considering it.

The Appomattox board will likely meet in a few days to consider the matter, as the tax levy and the budget have an April deadline for adoption.

The prevailing opinion here is that no school problem is anticipated and that the present harmonious operation will continue.

Dr. Jenkins To Retire As Health Director

Dr. H. E. Jenkins has tendered his resignation to the Virginia State Health Department as Health Director for Appomattox, Buckingham, Cumberland and Prince Edward Counties. The resignation will take effect as of July 1.

"There comes a time in the life of us all when we must slow down from the tensions of modern living, and that is what I plan to do," Dr. Jenkins said yesterday. He will retire and take things a bit easier after July 1.

Dr. Jenkins graduated in medicine in 1906. He spent 37 years on active, continuous duty in the U. S. Navy, and has been with the State Health Department for the past ten years. He summed his duties in his present position three years ago. He resides in Farmville.

He declared that his work here has been interesting and enlightening. "Everyone has been kind to me," he said, "and, I am most grateful for the cooperation that I have received."

Features of the Health Department work during his tenure have been programs of health education, maternal and child health, tuberculosis, sanitation and immunization. The later activity included the giving of Salk vaccine in the anti-polio program.

Dr. Jenkins says that after 51 years of constant work, he plans to pursue his avocations of reading, attending sports events, and some traveling to see more of his children and grandchildren, who reside elsewhere in the nation.
